

Course Description Form

Course number and section: ENGL 203 101

Course Topic: Topics in Composition: Crime and Punishment

Credits: 3

Term: 2021 W2

Instructor: Catherine Shaw

Course Description:

Are you curious about how different disciplines approach crime and punishment? In ENGL 203 we will explore how these topics are examined in a variety of different disciplines and from different perspectives. Focusing on rhetoric conventions within the social sciences, the humanities, and STEM disciplines, we will study published research within each field. Students will produce a final project that demonstrates their ability to reason, develop ideas, organize, write in an effective style, incorporate research, and revise their work.

Tentative Reading List:

All course materials will be available through the Library Online Course Reserves system (LOCR) via Canvas. These materials will include peer reviewed articles, trade publications, short stories, and media resources.
