Independent Research Paper

The Independent Research Paper (IRP) is a 9-credit academic paper of publishable length (between 7,500-10,000 words) based on independent research conducted by the student.

Early in term two, the coursework MA in English student must submit an "Independent Research Paper Proposal" (IRP Proposal) to his/her supervisor for approval. Typically, completing the proposal is an iterative process in which the student refines and revises the proposed research based on feedback received from the supervisor. The IRP Proposal should consist of a proposal of 1200-1500 words followed by a substantial bibliography (3 pages). After meeting the approval of the supervisor, the IRP proposal must be submitted to the MA in English Coordinator along with this form by March 1. Within one month of submission, the proposal will be evaluated by the GPPC and returned to the student and supervisor as accepted, requiring revisions, or declined. A full explanation of any changes required will be given to the student and supervisor. The student must re-submit until the proposal is accepted.

Thesis

The thesis is a 12-credit independent research project that advances current knowledge in the student's chosen field and within the larger discipline of literary and cultural studies. Students will work on the thesis project from the inception of their program of study. The thesis will be between 15,000 and 20,000 words based on independent research conducted by the student.

Early in term two, the thesis-option MA in English student must submit a Thesis Proposal to his/her supervisor and supervisory committee. Typically, completing the proposal is an iterative process in which the student refines and revises the proposed research based on feedback received from the supervisor and supervisory committee. The Thesis Proposal should be approximately 2500 words followed by a substantial bibliography (4 pages). After meeting the approval of the supervisor and the committee, the Thesis Proposal must be submitted to the MA in English Coordinator along with this form by March 1. Within one month of submission, the proposal will be evaluated by the GPPC and returned to the student and supervisor as accepted, requiring revisions, or declined. A full explanation of any changes required will be given to the student and supervisor. The student must re-submit until the Proposal is accepted.
