Course Description (aim for no more than 80 – 100 words for your course description):

This oral communication course aims to prepare students for professional and citizen life oral communication in French. Students will produce, observe and assess oral communication in live and recorded situations. The main assessment genre/device is the discussion group. The course is appropriate for students who seek to reach a range of competencies that goes from CEFR levels B2 to C2. It takes into account the plurilingual and pluricultural nature of life in higher education in Canada; it welcomes speakers of various assessed or perceived level of French (often called “fluency”). This year, the class will produce podcasts of various genres.
